WASHINGTON, June 9 .- Secretary Carlisle's reply to the sub-committee of the senate finance committee, charged with the investigation of the sale Governor Bradley has again donned of United States bonds during the years 1894, 1895 and 1896 was made public today. The statement is dated which led to the bond issues the secretary says:

The secretary continues: "In the meantime, the frequent presentation of notes for redemption in gold by individuals and institutions not desiring it for expectation clearly indicated the

A business drill was also gone through with, and the pupils performed all the transaction and made all the book entries of a long and complicated business deal. Hardly a mistake was made by any of the pupils. Governor Wells presented the diplomas and made a brief speech to the class. He urged upon them the importance of this period of their lives and the certainty that their after lives would be successful or otherwise according as they used wisely the instruction obtained. He trusted that none of them had fallen into the error of thinking they could cease to acquire knowledge. In the school they had simply learned how to think and study and to use properly the power which is the fruit of study.

"He who can learn nothing outside of the schoolroom can learn very little within it. If you have so much as learned what you want to know, much will have been accomplished, for in this day of widely diffused and diversified literature the discerning mind that can select the great and avoid the dross will give to its possessor vastly superior advantages in life. You have been taught to be honest and moral, for these are the first essentials but it is not enough that you be simply good, you must be good for something.

After emphasizing the value of hard work, the speaker closed by commending the following truism, which had been written in his album by a well known business man: "Remember this: nor wealth, nor state, But rustling hard that makes men great."

Methodist church last evening.

His subject, "Mission Days in California," was very ably handled, and it is to be regretted that a larger audience did not hear it.

He spoke of the heroic action of the old Catholic prests in trying to live up to their Spanish customs amid so many temptations, and also of their trouble in establishing missions.

He also spoke of their extreme poverty and the hardships endured, with only rude farming implements to till the soil and no fences to protect their vegetation from the reaming herds.

The "greusers," or Mexican settlers, were forever stirring up the Indians to do all sorts of evil things, and were restrained from open rebellion by the weakest kind of civil authority.

In closing he said: "Of course, it would not be possible in a lecture like this, or in any lecture, for that matter to detail all of the several leading the said."

VERSICLES.

The Laughing Rill.—
A tiny brooklet lightly flowed,
A gleaming sliver thread.
That smiled despite the sun that glowed
So flercely overhead.
Alas! that little laughing rill
Can bring no joy to me:
For, just the same I'll got a bill
For the ice it used to be.
—Washington Star.

Her Neck.—
He married her because her neck
With rapture wild did set him,
And yet there were some folks who said,
She broke it for to get him.

The band exchanged shots with the government pickets. The msurgents yesterday made unsuccessful attacks upon the government outposts at Gabriel, Ceiba de Lagua and various points along the Pinar del Rio trocha, burning adjacent houses in their retreat.

NEW YORK, June 9.—A dispatch to the Heraid from Kingston, Jamaica, says. The steamship Laurada is reported as at Port Antonio, where she is waiting for a cargo of fruit. She has been at Part Antonio since May 30. The authorities here have sexceed The town of Guanabacoa, just across has been at Port Antonio since May 30. The authorities here have searched her with a view to finding whether or not she carried arms or was engaged in a fillbustering expedition in aid of the revolutionists in Cuba. Nothing of a contraband nature was found on board the vessel. It is reported that several of the Spanish gunboats are watching the coast with the idea of intercepting the Laurado, when she shall go to sea.

The Laurada, which recently landed a fillbustering expedition in Cuba, had not been reported for several days, and much anxiety was feit for her in Cuban ofrcies here and in Florida as to the fate of the ship. Many of the Cubans believed, in fact, that the Laurada had been captured by Spanish coulsess.

cruisers.

The Laurada, after successfully disembarking the Ruise fillbustering expedition, returned to Jacksonville, Fla., where, however, as reported, she did not cure to remain, her captain having been warned that a United States revenue cutter was ready to intercept. The vessel then sailed, it was said for Charleston, whence she departed on May 5. Later the Cuban total at Tamps. Fla. received inforparted on May 5. Later the Cubar junta at Tamps, Fis., received infor-mation that the Laurada was lying to the westward of the Bahamas.
